All manufacturers will require PANTONE color ID's to make your garments/graphics. If you're designing in software and don't know the exact PANTONE ID, grab the hex code for the color you're using and convert it to a similar PANTONE ID online. Example: The hex code for a specific blue color is "4a6082" and it's closest PANTONE ID is "Pantone 7545 C". I like to use <https://codebeautify.org/hex-to-pantone-converter>. Also be mindful that your computer screen may display colors differently than your manufacturer's computer screen, so if you tell manufacturer to match a certain, let's say, blue color that's in your techpack (without giving a PANTONE ID), that blue may appear on their screen a little bit more dull or brighter and when they color match it with their eyes, it'll be wrong. ALWAYS PROVIDE PANTONE ID'S.
